Indian Ocean warming has reduced rainfall, says study

Scientists have found that the last two decades have seen a significant decline in rainfall over the Indian Ocean region, which is linked to the warming of the ocean surface. The study, published in the journal Nature, shows that the warming of the ocean surface has led to a decrease in the amount of moisture that is available for rainfall. This has resulted in a significant decline in rainfall over the Indian Ocean region, which is linked to the warming of the ocean surface.
